Speaking Independent Tasks 口语独立题

➤ Task 1

[Question]

Do you agree or disagree:

For success in career, good luck is as important as hard work.

[Response]

For really successful people, I definitely agree that good luck is way more important than hard work.

The first reason is that nobody really knows what's going to happen in the future. I mean, I think of the example of Bill Gates. When he created his first computers and programs, he had no idea that the personal computer was going to become such a big deal. It would be impossible for him to predict that.

Secondly, I think good luck is more important than hard work because a lot of people work hard. Like Michael Jordan found his success playing basketball, but millions of people around the world play basketball every single day, and they don't find the same success that Michael Jordan does.

Writing Independent Task 写作独立题

[Question]

Some students are required to do some activities after school, like sports or studying; some people believe that children should be given more time to do whatever they choose. Which opinion do you agree with?

[Response]

A growing number of people are trying to push back against the non-stop education craze in our modern times. These people believe that there's more to life than math equations and chemical compositions. They believe that in order to become wholesome and happy people, children need to be given time to play and to socialize. However, these people are wrong. Students need to focus completely on their studies.

First off, it's bad for society if kids are out there playing instead of studying. Through hard work and a good education, young students can grow up into hard-working adults who are able to produce valuable things for society. By producing things for society, people gain value in society and earn their place in society. If a person doesn't become a productive person, then they drain resources away from society. Therefore, every hour that a child spends playing instead of studying is an hour that child has stolen from society.

Furthermore, children might make terrible mistakes if they are allowed to choose what they do with their own time. When I was young, I had a friend who decided to go play outside all day because she saw it was snowing. After that, she got very sick, and this never would have happened if she had been given more direction in her life. Additionally, my older brother has a friend who went to university to study creative writing, a field that doesn't produce any product that's useful to society. Young people should not be given time to follow their own ideas and dreams. Instead, children should do what they are told so that they can grow up into adults who will do what they are told.

Finally, there's no reason for children to have free time when they are young because they will have plenty of free time after they retire. It's illogical to use up one's leisure time in one's youth. It would be like a sports team celebrating before the big match, and then practicing after the big match. Free time during youth is just backwards. Instead, the optimal approach should be to use every moment in youth to prepare for working life, then to work to produce value for society, and finally to retire when you are seventy years old so you can enjoy things in life like playing board games and telling young people what to do.

In conclusion, I believe I've laid out very strong reasons for why young students should devote their time to productive activities. Following this advice, young people can grow up to be successful, secure, and useful.

作者用 “furthermore” 引出了自己的第二个观点，“如果允许孩子们在空闲时间做他们想做的事的话，他们会犯错”，接下来用了他的朋友和他哥哥的朋友的例子来支持自己的观点，最后做出了总结：孩子们应该做被要求做的事，这样他

们长大后，能做被要求做的事情。
